ABSTRACT

In the modern era, retro-style fashion is a special line that combines elements of the past and the present. It is a very delicate style; it includes the brightness of the paint, intricate silhouette and romantic mood. Modern stylists and designers are inspired by the past and come up with many ideas for themselves. Fashion still doesn't stop, and many trends that previously lost their relevance are once again hot and captivating women's hearts. Fashion enthusiasts of all ages will appreciate not only the retro style but also the shine and fame. This article discusses the types of retro clothing and how to create modern clothes based on retro style. Among young girls, the most popular retro style dress was one with a beautiful skirt embellished or wrapped around the top.

KEYWORDS: Vintage models, retro floral dresses, maxi dresses, elegant decor dresses, decorative elements.

Introduction

Human abilities, social environment, and political processes have influenced the development of the fine arts, which in turn has contributed to the constant renewal of fashion. In this sense, a careful study of the history of fine arts and clothing by identifying specific criteria for the development of artistic thinking allows for an in-depth analysis of changes in society and the acquisition of extensive knowledge.

However, it should be noted that world art, although formed as a result of various influences, socio-political changes, has continued to evolve, constantly having its specific features. Different trends, trends, styles have emerged and a huge artistic heritage of mankind has been created [1-4]. It is important that Western and Eastern countries gradually and interdependently study the basics of the formation and development of the history of clothing, focus on the analysis of trends, reasons for the emergence of styles, features, generalize the development trends of costume and fashion history.

Modern retro dresses. Retro-style clothing makes people feel nostalgic, so all the details of the image should match it. Therefore, it can be very difficult to find the right shoes and accessories for this outfit. Stylists do not recommend overloads to look harmonious. Vintage models are decorative elements. At the same time, retro-style floral dresses are especially unique - they usually don't wear eye-catching jewellery. Among young girls, the most popular dress in retro style can be a beautiful skirt decorated or wrapped top [5,6,7].

Based on this model, many differences are predicted, many of which have similar features:

- The length of the dress is slightly above or slightly below the knee. Maxi dresses are rare in this modern direction;
- The main material for such clothes is satin. In addition, some models are made of natural silk, brocade, chiffon, satin and other fabrics;

- Most models are made of bright materials. Embroidery is often found - retro-style dresses can be adorned with geometric patterns, large and small flowers, peas and similar ornaments;
- Most products are made from 2-3 materials and vary in colour and texture. However, one of them can distinguish one main direction;
- Often retro-style dresses have large decorative elements - belts, bows, wide belts and other details.

Retro dresses with long skirts. The beautiful and sophisticated retro dress on the floor gives the image of a beautiful lady and emphasizes her elegance. Typically, they are cut free or half-shore. Meanwhile, in the 1950s, some pink models reached the ground or to the feet. Most often, these dresses are decorated with lace ornaments, and this delicate and elegant decor can be placed over the entire surface of the dress [8,9]. Retro style long dresses are complementary, high heel shoes and nylon pantyhose or stockings (Fig.2.).

Retro style collar dress. Often young girls and older women choose a collared dress in retro style. In addition, this model is often filled with benefits, the colour and stylistic performance perfectly match the collar. Among such dresses, black or dark brown white stylized element products are a real hit [Fig.3.].

At the same time, the round neckline is not the only variation of retro-style dress decorations. It can also be adorned with a sewn collar, lacy chalet or original collar that can be sewn in a variety of ways around the neck. All of this has a modern look and evokes the most fantastic fantasies of the opposite sex.

Polka Dot retro dresses. In the twentieth century, polka dots were one of the most popular fabrics, and it was absolutely visible on any piece of clothing. To this day, this original way of decorating women's clothing is also of little importance. Retro dresses in polka dots are available in a variety of options - sheath dresses, trapezoidal models, bright yellows, luxury suits and more (Fig.4.) [9-13].

Although this print is considered universal and is suitable for any woman, it is recommended to consider the following nuances when choosing a retro dress with a polka dot of the image type:

- If the dots on the fabric are large, the dress should be as simple as possible;
- Stuffed girls are better off choosing a different size print or a slightly elongated dot - these options make the silhouette visually appealing. stretch as and make it thinner;

- The combination of small and large dots helps to focus on specific parts of the body.

Knitted dress in retro style. Knitwear is one of the most popular needlework that young girls and women love in old age. With this, you can create original and original models of women's clothing that are truly unique. For this reason, you can even trick or bite into an evening gown that draws the attention of others to its owner (Fig.5).

Typically, such products are produced in an open method. Summer picks are worn on the naked body, so they show themselves in the nude places around them. Retro-style knit dresses are made of thick yarn to keep warm and not freeze the fashionable woman. In some cases, they are tucked into a t-shirt or turtleneck. However, such combinations are absolutely incompatible with the edition (Fig.5.).

Retro Pencil Dress. The “matter” or “pencil” case is universal because it is suitable for women of any body size and can also fit in absolutely any situation. The cover-worn retro looks short, cute and glamorous. Despite showing a very small part of a woman’s body, this product emphasizes this figure very well and makes it more attractive to the opposite sex. As a rule, the length of such a long dress in retro style reaches to the back of the knees. It can have any colour and style design, but it is typical for office and business events, you have to choose a product from cotton materials in universal colours [14-17]. If a woman does not follow strict formal dress rules at work, she decorates her working life with bright dresses that point to the 1940s or 1950s (Fig.6).

Dress in a patterned retro style. If the styles of retro dresses are very diverse, then the decors of most models, this way may be different. In some cases, they are decorated only with a clasp or suit, while in others they are decorated with almost the entire surface. In this case, the lace is designed to emphasize the femininity, elegance and beauty of the beautiful lady. The same task is performed with yarns and ruffles, which are very often used when finishing retro models [15-19]. Purple dresses look like play, but not indiscriminately. In most cases, they have simple clasps and thin ribbons designed to be parallel to each other or to intersect.

In retro models, the line is usually located on several levels, making it look magical and attractive when the girl is dancing or moving smoothly and calmly. Retro evening dresses are decorated not only with fabric tones but also with decor made of original or artificial leather, beads and beads. In modern models, such jewellery varies from the neckline to the bottom of the dress, so it looks a little colourful.

However, such options are great for parties and other women. Made styles are acceptable for them as vintage and retro models are rare. They show off the beauty around a woman's legs and the attractive curves of her body, but she doesn't look spotless and unobtrusive. These features reflect retro-style cocktail dresses that can have absolutely any silhouette, but the subtlety of the waist needs to be clearly defined and emphasized. Many girls and women do not believe that beautiful retro-style dresses exist not only for fashion inventors but also for wearing in ordinary life [17-20].

This is far from the case. On the contrary, some styles of women's clothing that directed us to the middle of the twentieth century allow every beautiful woman to be slimmer and "lose" a few pounds. In order not to go wrong with the choice is useful to take into account the following recommendations of fashion stylists:

- Clothing should be dense and made of high-quality materials. Thin shiny fabric with a picture imperfection is contraindicated;
- Shiny items behave best. Pay proper attention to fabrics with a glossy texture;
- Black retro dresses are visually appealing. Reduces size, but at the same time emphasizes all the lines of the silhouette. Therefore, women with a large and disproportionate number should prefer other blacks - brown, blue or grey.

Conclusion

The dialogue between design and society is endless and constant. Because it is a society that is the consumer of various design products, it is the public that is the consumer of design products that have a certain look, a certain quality and a certain price level. If the process of artistic design of a design product is properly organized, the product - interior, architectural building, clothing, footwear, and other consumer goods - will be technologically, economically, aesthetically, and ecologically perfect.
